Special Issues

Regarding the Journal of Regional & Socio-Economics Issues (JRSEI), the standard number of issues per year is: three (3). Any additional issues, within any specific year, are either Special Issues, following research and academic developments and needs, specific in any period, such as economic crisis, pandemics, or Special Issues, following conferences & projects.

In order to better serve academic community and concentrate on high interest, special issues of JRSEI are welcome at any time.

A special issue should be organized by accomplished experts in a given academic research area and it should attract articles of the highest quality, according to the JRSEI requirements.

Proposals of special issue should include the following information:

- A suggested topic for the Special Issue
- Proposed Aims and Scope with an outline of the Special Issue's intended focus and a list of the topics to be covered.
- Names of Guest Editors to manage the Special Issue with their emails, affiliations, and an one-paragraph biography of each of the Guest Editors

All special issue proposals should be submitted to Chief-Editor at
